BPD to students: Lock up and don't party too hard

School's out. Thanksgiving break means increased break-in rates, and cops don't want students to become victims.

Before you plan to ditch the folks and head back to Boston early to party, be warned: Boston police are keeping an eye out for underage and loud parties.

The interim head of the Boston Police Department penned a message to Boston college students ahead of the mass exodus for the Thanksgiving break.

In the letter, which was posted online Monday, Interim Commissioner William Evans reminded Hub students leaving for the break to secure their apartments to avoid becoming victims of a burglary.

Additionally, he also offered a warning for those who are looking to party before classes are back in session.

Evans said that certain areas of the city experience higher levels of break-ins due to students forgetting to lock doors and windows when they depart for the holidays.

He urged students leaving for an extended period of time to make sure doors and windows are locked and air conditioners are removed, especially if they're accessible from a fire escape. Certain items that are left behind can be particular targets of burglars and should be taken home.

Quoted

"Certain areas of the city experience higher levels of house breaks due to students forgetting to lock doors and windows and during the departure for the holidays."

William Evans
Interim Commissioner, Boston police

"Jewelry, game systems and games and iPods also tend to be items that are attractive to would-be perpetrators," Evans said.

Evans also said that students who live on campus shouldn't have a false sense of security that their dorm room would be monitored and should secure those areas as well.

Additionally, Evans also warned students returning to the area early that the department would monitor certain areas for parties.

"Should you come back to your residence prior to the start of classes, please keep in mind that we will be monitoring the neighborhoods for loud and underage parties. Understand that these are neighborhoods where people live and work," he said.

Many Boston-area schools such as Northeastern University, Suffolk University and Boston University list today as the beginning of their Thanksgiving recess.

Alleged Dunkin' robber is caught

The man suspected of terrorizing Dunkin' Donuts workers throughout Greater Boston in recent months was finally arrested on Tuesday.

Isaiah Murphy will be arraigned in Stoughton District Court today, Canton police said.

Following weeks of an "intense investigation" into the robberies of more than 20 Dunkin' Donuts shops, Canton police, along with Boston police and the FBI, said they executed a search warrant at Murphy's home and found evidence linking him to the robberies.

The Canton-based Dunkin' Donuts had offered a $10,000 reward. METRO

Death investigation

Man, 73, victim of apparent murder in Cambridge

Law enforcement officials from Cambridge police and the Middlesex district attorney's office are investigating the apparent murder of a 73-year-old man in Cambridge, authorities said Tuesday.

Officials released few details about the death.

The man was found at 243 Broadway. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

The 73-year-old man, who was not identified, was found by Cambridge police inside an apartment at 243 Broadway. Officers were called to the apartment just before midnight, but authorities did not say why. When officers arrived they found the man suffering from severe injuries. He was later pronounced dead.

Immigration. Walsh says he wouldn't enforce Secure Communities

Hoping to discuss immigration with other new mayors in the coming weeks, Boston Mayor-elect Marty Walsh on Tuesday said if he could "get around" enforcing the Secure Communities Act, he would.

Asked if he would "continue implementing" Secure Communities in Boston, Walsh said, "If we can get around it, we won't." His remarks were made at the Massachusetts Immigrant and Refugee Advocacy Coalition's Thanksgiving luncheon Tuesday. SHNS

Police ask for help finding missing mom

Boston police are asking for the public's help to bring home a young mother who went missing more than six years ago after she was last seen in Dorchester.

On Tuesday, citing the holiday season, police renewed their call for help to find Felicia McGuyer.

McGuyer, 32, was last seen in October 2007 on Roxton Street in Dorchester, police said. She then disappeared, leaving behind a 10-year-old son.

"McGuyer's family is concerned for her safety and well-being," Boston police said in a statement. "It is not common behavior for McGuyer to be out of touch with her son, other family and friends."

It's not clear what happened to McGuyer or where she went.

Police described her as a white woman, about 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighing about 140 pounds with brown hair and green eyes.

City living. New Urban Mechanics office up for national Harvard award

Mayor Thomas Menino's Office of New Urban Mechanics is one of five government programs across the nation vying for the Harvard Kennedy School's Innovations in American Government Award, which recognizes excellence in the public sector.

The school's Ash Center for Democratic Governance and Innovation announced Tuesday that the program was selected as a finalist from a pool of more than 600 applicants.

According to local officials, the program aims to deliver transformative city services to residents, increase civic participation, improve city streets and boost educational outcomes.

The other four finalists are: the federal website Challenge.gov; Healthy Incentives of King County, Washington; the federal Neighborhood Revitalization Initiative; and the Smart Roadside Inspection System of New Mexico.

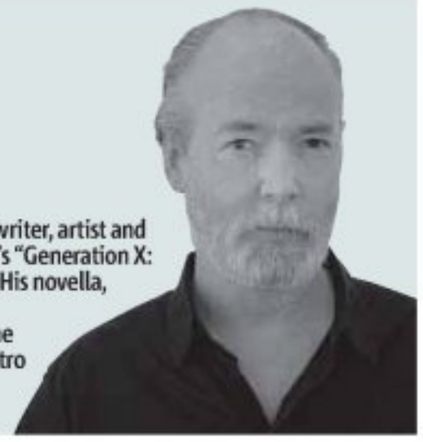
Day 18: Temp empathizes with ducklings

I stayed for a while at Chantelle's, but declined her vodka as I still had to drive to the oil refinery to meet with Kyle, who answered a meet-for-coffee text with: "blue gate, refinery north road, 7:45 look for billboard with photo of happy mallard duck family."

Metro exclusive

DOUGLAS COUPLAND



Douglas Coupland is a Canadian writer, artist and designer. His first novel was 1991's "Generation X: Tales for an Accelerated Culture." His novella, "Temp," of which this is the 18th installment, will be running online and in the pages of your daily Metro until this Friday.

Indeed I found the Duck Family portrait with the banner caption, "Always Putting the Environment First." It stood in front of a crude oil-cracking facility straight out of a sci-fi film where mutants on a slave planet convert poor people into snacks for the master species.

"Isn't this place great?" asked Kyle, coming in from the parking lot and wearing his still brand-new journeyman's outfit. "I start on the 8 o'clock night shift. I'm totally stoked."

"Kyle, this place is freaky, and who knows what toxins there are in there."

"Shannon, for a guy with no degree this is a good foot in the door. And if I play my cards right, I can be a supervisor in a few years."

My heart felt like one of those little ducklings onto which a massive Acme cartoon anvil has fallen from a mile up. "Where's Mr. Burns' office?"

"Admin's about a mile that-away. Why are you so bummed out? I've got a real grown-up-job job. You should be happy for me."

I was silent.

"And look, I can maybe go work in Libya or Abu Dhabi and make crazy money. That's where the action is. Six months in the Emirates — business-class ticket each way — live in a walled compound with satellite TV and well-stocked fridges? The sky's the limit."

I sighed.

"You're always looking for fun facts. Did you know that one barrel of oil — 42 gallons — yields 44 gallons of petroleum products?"

"I didn't."

"It's because when crude oil is converted, it increases in volume. Roughly half of each barrel of crude oil is turned into gasoline for transportation."

When did Kyle drink the "New Kyle" Kool-Aid? I never saw this coming.

He asked, "Why did you want to see me, anyway? Trying to get me involved in your evil plot with the Chinese?"

"As a matter of fact, yes."

"I don't think I'm the espionage type."

"It's not espionage."

"Look, now's not the time for this. I'm going to be late on my first day if I don't get in right now." He started edging backward toward the entryway. "Besides, this is where I'm at in my life right now. I'm an oil guy."

"Promise me you'll call if you change your mind?"

"Gotta go Shannon. Bye."

I waved goodbye and got back into Danimal's BMW. I turned on the radio where "Dust in the Wind" by Kansas was playing and promptly began bawling.

CULTURE

Out Dec. 25

'The Wolf of Wall Street'

Prestige level: Word is this rollicking look at hedonistic stockbrokers (Leonard DiCaprio, etc.) is "Goodfellas" but with even more evil characters.

Oscar potential: Many are complaining about the 165-minute length (as though lots of Scorsese in revved-up mode were a bad thing).

Now, for your consideration

Upcoming. There are still plenty more Oscar contenders that have yet to hit theaters.

Oscar Isaac and Justin Timberlake star in "Inside Llewyn Davis." / ALISON ROSA

It's late November and we're only up to our kneecaps in Oscar season. While "12 Years a Slave," "Gravity," "Dallas Buyers Club" and (yeesh) "Prisoners" have already captured audiences' more serious side, the next month has a bounty of Oscar bait coming our way — as well as some proudly dumber fare.

See more at www.metro.us

'Out of the Furnace'

(limited: Dec. 4; everywhere: Dec. 6)
Prestige level: You would think a grimy drama pairing Christian Bale with "Crazy Heart" director Scott Cooper would be rank to the rafters. But the gutter noir plot, involving murder and revenge, is not what brightens Academy members' days.
Oscar potential: Gutter noir is, of course, preferable to Oscar cheese, and as far as "gritty" lower class romps go, the science here is tighter than the plot of "The Place Beyond the Pines."

'American Hustle'

(limited: Dec. 13; everywhere: Dec. 18)
Prestige level: The once controversial David O. Russell has improbably reformed into an Academy favorite. He rounds up some of his former stars to go "Boogie Nights" on this tale of the feds trying to bust up Jersey 'hoods.
Oscar potential: Russell has a chaotic style that made both "The Fighter" and "Silver Linings Playbook" atypically manic and abrasive Oscar bait. Still, the last time Christian Bale acted for him, as he does here, he was a showboaty ham.

Winter movie guide continues on page 10

Check it out

'Inside Llewyn Davis'

(limited: Dec. 6, everywhere: Dec. 20)
Prestige level: They're incorrigible eccentrics who follow their insane muse, but the Coens are beloved by the Oscars, and voters will likely go gaga over their look at the 1960s Greenwich Village folk scene, specifically an uncompromising, unpleasant musician (Oscar Isaac).
Oscar potential: This is the Coens in bleak/sadistic mode, which is to say the film is a mordant hoot to those with a dark sense of humor.

'Saving Mr. Banks'

(Dec. 13)
Prestige level: Where are the chimney sweeps? Disney tells the story of one of its greatest successes, "Mary Poppins," with Emma Thompson as its strident creator, P.L. Travers, and Tom Hanks as Uncle Walt.
Oscar potential: Travers hated, hated, hated the movie. She despised it. But that's not a nice story, so Disney does what it did to classic fairy tales: sanitizes it, making Travers a grump who gradually comes around to the cultural overlords making mincemeat of her work. And this will become the story that most people know. The magic of Disney!

'Her'

(limited: Dec. 18; everywhere: January)
Prestige level: Spike Jonze's latest concerns a lonely Los Angelino (Joaquin Phoenix) in the very near future who falls in love with his newfangled, highly personable Operating System (voiced by Scarlett Johansson).
Oscar potential: Jonze usually works with collaborators (Charlie Kaufman, Dave Eggers), but flies solo here. And it turns out he's a talented writer, too, and his film even makes a ballsy gambit: He doesn't portray human-on-OS love as bad.

Meryl Streep is back (with an accent and a drug problem, no less) in "August: Osage County." / CLAIRE FOLGER

Also coming to theaters

Will Ferrell and the gang return for "Anchorman 2: The Legend Continues." GEMMA LAMANA

Best Picture nominees? Nah.

'The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug' (Dec. 13): This is Peter Jackson's supersized take on J.R.R. Tolkien's initial, more child-geared trip to Middle Earth. It promises more Benedict Cumberbatch-voiced dragons and fewer sickly hedgehogs.

'Anchorman 2: The Legend Continues' (Dec. 20): Will Ferrell's first stint as mustachioed ego monster Ron Burgundy is rather hilarious. And let's not forget Ferrell is at his best when collaborating with director Adam McKay ("Step Brothers," "The Other Guys").

'47 Ronin' (Dec. 25): Japan got Tom Cruise in "The Last Samurai;" now its esteemed "national legend" — a much-filmed tale of revenge — gets headlined by Keanu Reeves.

'Grudge Match' (Dec. 25): A dream of both boxing enthusiasts and cinephiles — Rocky vs. Jake LaMotta — comes to us slightly belatedly with Sylvester Stallone and Robert De Niro, who took 30 years to settle a rivalry.

'The Secret Life of Walter Mitty'

(Dec. 25)
Prestige level: Remember that old James Thurber story about a wallflower with an overactive imagination but no willpower to change his life? No more! Now Mitty (Ben Stiller, who also directed) is a shy guy who suddenly finds himself doing crazy stuff, teaching us about carpe diem.
Oscar potential: If you can overlook how this completely nixes the entire point of the Thurber story, then have at it!

'August: Osage County'

(Dec. 25)
Prestige level: This is a dysfunctional family reunion film with Meryl Streep and Julia Roberts and Chris Cooper and Margo Martindale and Benedict Cumberbatch and Abigail Breslin and even Juliette Lewis. And it's based on a Pulitzer-feted play by Tracy Letts.
Oscar potential: This movie was directed by John Wells, a TV vet who made the sleepy "The Company Men." But is it a good idea to give Streep both an accent and a drug problem?

Shore to door service

The Moorings condos sit harborside. / BRIAN URKEVIC

Condos. The Moorings is Hingham's new waterfront haven.

Of all the many amenities that The Moorings in Hingham harbor boasts, none are quite as cool as the fact that the MBTA water shuttle stops just steps from your front door. There's also the Greenbush Commuter Rail line, but who wouldn't choose a half-hour cruise into Boston?

Not that Hingham residents are itching to leave their picturesque South Shore town, which is increasingly attracting new residents to developments like The Moorings. Situated by the water, this condominium complex was nearly sold out at press time, but phase two, which will encompass slightly lower-priced homes, between $400,000 and $800,000, will soon begin. Phase one's price tags ran from just under $500,000 to almost $1.5 million, but that building boasts covered garage parking to whisk residents straight into the lobby and to their door. That's something that will come in handy as winter sets in.

Phase two should be on the market by the end of this year, at which point construction will commence, giving a projected move-in date in early 2015. Phase three, the final building, will begin shortly after that. Each building is consistent in its luxury-level interiors, but it's really the location, with its harbor views, that is the biggest draw.

"Living by the water is all about the sea views," says sales director Erin DeGenova. "That's what home buyers are looking for. The Moorings is unique because it's a brand new construction right on the water. We are attracting an interesting mix of people from single professionals to empty nesters in their 50s. But they all want the same thing: the

When it comes to seaside homes that have the best of both worlds – the sea life and city amenities – Hingham has it covered. Not only are there city comforts – shops, restaurants, bars, cinema – on tap at the shipyard complex, but it is half an hour from Boston via the water shuttle, which docks at Rowes Wharf.

A Thanksgiving Missive

By Attorney George Warshaw

Thanksgiving is a special time in which people travel from everywhere, in every direction, to reunite with family and friends.

It's a time to put aside family differences and remember the importance of being a family and offering help where needed.

It's also a time to reflect on the most unusual convergence of holidays and perhaps some value that can be taken from it.

Hanukkah is the Jewish holiday that celebrates the power and resilience of human belief and the reward that was received as a result of that belief. Hanukkah falls on Thanksgiving Day.

Hanukkah is the story of an ancient struggle for Jewish independence from Greek-Syrian occupation. After Jews retook their holy temple (Temple Mount) from barbarian occupiers, they only had enough oil to light a single holy lamp in the Temple for a single day, but through the power of belief and prayer, the lamp stayed lit for eight days until a sufficient supply of oil could be obtained.

If you've been beaten up by the recession or suffered personal setbacks or misfortune, keep the Hanukkah lesson in mind this Thanksgiving and stay resilient and determined.

And this Thanksgiving, if you're more fortunate than others, rather than giving thanks for what you've received, perhaps give a little thanks where it is needed.

Happy Thanksgiving
Happy Hanukkah
From George & Bruiser.

Detox after T-Day with these juices

Here are two new options to get your started.

MEREDITH ENGEL

1 Juice Press's Pumpkin Spice

Juice Press's Pumpkin Spice contains 550 percent (!) of your daily dose of vitamin A, thanks to the carrot juice it touts as its primary ingredient. Still, you won't feel like Bugs Bunny when sipping this — it's like a creamy, cold Pumpkin Spice Latte. The juice is cold-pressed, meaning that it contains way more nutrients than a pasteurized version, which kills enzymes (but provides a longer shelf-life). $7, www.juicepress.com

2 Aloha's powder The Daily Good

Aloha's The Daily Good isn't a drink — it's a whole-food powder that you stir into water or another beverage of your choice. That powder packs a powerful punch, with wild blueberries, coconut water, wheatgrass juice, spinach, three types of mushrooms and a slew of other healthy ingredients. The patented process purees then dries the ingredients, so the fiber and other nutrients aren't lost in the shuffle. The powder is pretty tasteless, so it blends seamlessly into your drink. $75 for a 30-day supply, www.aloha.com

AERIN

Aerin Lauder's new fragrance collection consists of five distinct scents that share some of the lifestyle maven's favorite experiences: summers in the Hamptons (Gardenia Rattan), cozied up fireside during a mountain retreat (Amber Musk) or dancing until sunrise (Evening Rose). Even if you haven't experienced the fabulous memories the Estee Lauder heiress is inspired by, one thing is for sure: Any one of these chic bottles, topped with a gorgeous stone cap, will add a jolt of glam to your shelves. And the boxes they come in, designed by famed textile firm Lee Jofa, are perfect for gifting. $110 each, www.aerin.com

Clinique

Finding the perfect nude shade for your skin tone — especially if you're a woman of color — is one of those makeup feats. That's why we are so impressed with Clinique. The brand, already know as one of the pioneer cosmetic companies to create foundations that cater to a range of skin tones, is launching the new 16 Shades of Beige Collection. Like Christian Louboutin's line of nude pumps, this limited-edition collection of nail enamels and shadows comes in a variety of beige and brown shades. Find the perfect one for you when they hit stores this December.

SARMA CHANNELS A TURKISH NEIGHBORHOOD TAVERN BY WAY OF SOMERVILLE

Thursty

LUKE O'NEIL
@LUKEONEIL47

Depending on your thoughts about neighborhoods changing over time, the loss of long-time Winter Hill standby The Paddock in 2012 was either another sign of Somerville's gentrification or a boon to the culinary health and vibrance of the city.

Word that the new tenants would be Ana Sortun and Cassie Piuma of Cambridge's beloved Oleana and Sofra nudged opinions decidedly in the latter direction. That said, the strikingly modern addition of Sarma to the quiet residential neighborhood is a bit jarring at first blush.

Inside, the initial shock to Somerville's system gives way to a sense of comfort, with its hybrid industrial and bright Mediterranean aesthetic. The sharp brick edges of the room are softened by playful touches — a hung door for a wall, mismatched upholstered banquets, dangling glass lamps and a mostly open kitchen, just off the large stone bar.

The concept is based on Turkish neighborhood taverns, the owners say. That influence can prove confusing — namely when you encounter servers wandering the dining room with specials from the kitchen, which they try to hawk to guests, dim-sum style.

Sarma, which opened last month, is located at 249 Pearl St. in Somerville. / ALL PHOTOS DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN

Bar director Vikram Hegde takes his flavor inspirations from the kitchen. "One of the most important themes of our bar program is a marriage of kitchen-to-cocktail program," he says. That means cardamom, mastic and Aleppo chili, among the less-predictable ingredients.

The Hippodrome takes rhum Agricole, sage, lime and mastic, a resin common in Greek desserts. It's akin to how we use vanilla here, he explains, but with a bit of pine and anise and an earthy note that makes it well suited to rhum Agricole. The result is a bright, clean mid-course palate cleanser.

The Cane Salata is an apertif-style cocktail made with Punt e Mes, grapefruit juice and cancale (a blend of fennel, sea salt and orange peel) that is exceptionally tart and dry, in the best way. The Silent Seventh is a Pimms Cup-style riff with vodka, muddled cucumber, Aleppo chili, lemon juice and lemon tea syrup.

Less is more when it comes to a lot of these ingredients, Hegde says, but they add a depth of flavor that's remarkable without being overpowering. "I'm actually shocked by how receptive people have been to trying the drinks," he says. "They have been going really wild for stuff on the menu rather than venturing off-list." Suddenly, gentrification is looking a lot more appealing.

MGMT

The psychedelic rockers' self-titled third album is a statement of identity: "We're presenting ourselves in the way we'd like to be seen."

'TIME TO PRETEND' IS OVER

MGMT's Andrew VanWyngarden and Ben Goldwasser never wanted to be famous. But quirky, poppy zingers like "Kids," "Electric Feel" and "Time to Pretend" from their 2007 debut, "Oracular Spectacular," made them household names, especially after being featured in movies such as "21," TV shows such as "The Voice" and a Nokia ad. It was like their psychedelic, private art-house jamming session had been crashed by an accidental open Facebook invitation.

Rather than embrace the masses, the Brooklyn-based duo stoically continued with an even more zany second album, "Congratulations," in 2010. The early days of face paints, hippie headwear and neon accents were discarded and "Kids" was no longer on the set list.

This apparent fan neglect reads as career suicide; MGMT's paradoxical style can seem frustratingly hipster but they, as self-indulgent as this sounds, are out to please themselves. The 30-year-old rockers are in an enviably privileged position with the backing of a major label (Columbia), free to satiate their musical whims — something they've taken into their self-titled third album "MGMT." Here, Goldwasser chats about the new album, pop culture and his disdain for social media.

You said that your music has been misunderstood and labeled incorrectly in the past. Is this album about reestablishing your identity?
I feel like we're presenting ourselves in the way we'd like to be seen. I think it's a little strange to us that people want to impose a narrative on us as a band. We're not thinking too much about what our image is.

You get a lot of criticism for alienating your fans, but you've got nearly 4 million Facebook likes. Do you find it frustrating that critics and people keep harking back to the days of "Kids"?
It's frustrating. We've never intentionally alienated anybody. We're people who appreciate lots of different music: catchy dance music, noisy industrial stuff and quiet, pretty music that you'd listen to in your living room. Maybe a lot of the critics who said we're trying to alienate our fans only have this one-dimensional appreciation of music.

In "Plenty of Girls in the Sea" you say, "The trick is to try to stay free." Why splice politics into your lyrics?
I think there is a lack of freedom here. I think if more people started acting on what they really believed in and started saying what's on their minds or that kind of thing, there would be a lot of opposition. A lot of people are afraid and too comfortable or don't want to risk giving up that level of comfort for potentially something better. I feel like things could go in a nasty direction if people realized that the comfort that they thought they had is, in fact, transient.

You just started tweeting in January 2013. Why have you been resistant to embrace fans via social media?
I guess we just started doing it because we were bored in the studio and we were looking for something to do. But I don't personally do any social media stuff.

No Facebook?
No, I'm not on Facebook. I just do Instagram — posting funny things I see on the street. We don't really like putting our egos out there as a band.

Is it because you're concerned about your privacy?
I mean, partially. I'd be lying if I said I didn't care about having some sort of privacy. I don't really appreciate that level of ego-driven social media behavior — I just think it's really obnoxious.

Led by the great Fat Mike, NOFX is one of the key bands from the 1990s school of punk pop. Despite their highly melodic style, their decidedly punk refusal of all major label offers and indifference toward radio and MTV meant they never fully crossed over to the mainstream. But that defiant stance never really hurt them — if anything, it helped their reputation. Their legions of fans hardly need to be told where to find them. Also, note that we have blurred out any potentially offensive gestures from their photo. MATTHEW DINARO

Oscar Wilde reached the peak of his fame with this razor-sharp 1895 comedy of manners about two wealthy young responsibility-phobic bon vivants (i.e., the Victorian equivalent of hipsters) who attempt to seduce two different women using the same phony identity, which, in one of those classic Wilde reversals of logic, turns out to be less phony than they think.

There probably isn't a stand-up comedian alive who hasn't been influenced at least second-hand by Bill Cosby. Now 76, he has just as many hilariously wise observations about old age as he did the other phases of life. History 'lesson' a bunch of Bull

Re: 'A reversal of roles' (Metro, Nov. 25) In his letter, Dean Vigliano correctly admonishes a previous letter writer for attributing to southern Republicans the blocking of civil rights in the South in the 1960s, rather than the true obstructionists — the Southern Democrats. However, Vigliano then references the notorious Bull Connor as having been the police chief of Birmingham, Ala.

"Get the facts straight," says Vigliano. But Connor was the commissioner of public safety, whereas Jamie Moore was police commissioner of Birmingham throughout the entire 1960s. I just love irony.

RITCHIE TIEMANN, VIA EMAIL

GOP, Dems don't disagree on civil rights

Re: 'A reversal of roles' (Metro, Nov. 25) The 1960s civil rights legislation was opposed by Southern DEMOCRATS, not Republicans as you indicated. The Republican party was formed specifically to oppose slavery and promote civil rights; its first successful presidential candidate was Abraham Lincoln. This tradition of supporting civil rights continued into the present era with Republican President Eisenhower sending the 101st Airborne Division to enforce desegregation in a Little Rock, Ark., public school on Sept. 24, 1957. In recent years, Republicans and Democrats have differed on related issues such as affirmative action and the size of the welfare state, but not on fundamental civil rights.

NFL stuffs slate on turkey day

NFL. The pro football platter is larger than ever on this Thanksgiving.

There was a time when part of the allure of the annual Thanksgiving Day games, hosted by the Lions and Cowboys, was how teams would respond to the short work week. That portion of the equation is gone, given that the NFL now trots out a Thursday night game nearly every week of the season.

In 2006, the league also added a third game, a night contest, to the Thanksgiving Day slate. Here's a look at the Thursday schedule:

Jason Witten and the Cowboys face the Raiders Thursday. / GETTY IMAGES

Packers at Lions
(12:30 p.m., FOX)
Ndamukong Suh grabbed the headlines the last time these two met on Thanksgiving, a 27-15 Green Bay win in 2011. Suh famously stomped on the arm of Green Bay lineman Evan Dietrich-Smith and was ejected. Tempers are sure to be high again this year as the Packers (5-5-1) trail the Lions (6-5) by just a half game in the NFC North. With over 10 teams still alive in the NFC playoff picture, a win here is something close to a must for both.

Raiders at Cowboys
(4:30 p.m., CBS)
The Cowboys (6-5) are riding high after their win at MetLife Stadium last Sunday, but can't overlook the Raiders (4-7), who are still looking to make a run at a wild card spot. Oakland last played on Thanksgiving in 2009, a 24-7 loss to the Cowboys. The Raiders won't have an easy time picking up a road win as the Jerry Dome has become a tough place for visitors.

The Cowboys are 4-1 this season at home.

By the numbers

1934

The Detroit Lions' tradition of playing on Thanksgiving Day dates back to 1934. The Cowboys began their string of playing every Turkey Day in 1978.

Steelers at Ravens
(8:30 p.m., NBC)
The Steelers are playing their first Turkey Day game since an infamous 1998 holiday game against the Lions in which referee Phil Luckett helped serve up a Detroit win. Luckett claimed that Steelers captain Jerome Bettis said, "head-tails!" when calling the overtime coin flip. The Lions won the toss with "tails," despite Bettis insisting that he had only called "tails," and Detroit went on to win the game. As for 2013, the Steelers and Ravens are two of six teams that currently own a 5-6 record in the AFC.
